Once upon a time at the North Pole, a young elf named Cole Snow spent a lot of time playing with his five younger siblings. Every day was fun because each of his little sisters and brothers had their own favorite toys, and Cole was always thinking up new games for them to play. When he learned how to do woodwork at school, he even made them some new toys. Their playroom was overflowing!

When Cole left school, he became an apprentice toymaker at Santa's Workshop. Here, he learned how to make all sorts of gadgets, games and playthings. Not many people know this, but Santa's elves keep an eye on the toys we see in the shops before Christmas. They are there to help children choose what they want from Santa, and to help the elves know which toys to make. If a child does their best to behave nicely all year, Santa will bring them an extra-special version of the toy they wanted - made with love by Cole, now the Chief Toymaker, and his skilled team of Toymaker Elves.

All About The Games Cabin

Cole Snow's home is known to his friends as the Games Cabin - and Cole is their Games Master!

Decorated with the candies so popular at the North Pole, Cole's home is a favorite hangout for elves on their days off. Although his brothers and sisters are now all grown up, the Games Master still loves to invent new games to play with his friends. Often, he will create some new rules or add a twist to an existing board game, but sometimes he will come up with something brand new. Not all his games are a success, but a few have become favorites. Surrounded by snacks, and staying cozy from the cold outside, a day with Cole and his friends at the Games Cabin is guaranteed to be fun. Elves can get quite competitive here, and there's always a fierce battle to be crowned the winner.

Sometimes, Cole asks the other elves to bring their own toys to help test the new toys he has made in his workshop. A new toy, game or gadget can keep a group of elves happy - and survive for a whole day - he knows it's a good one!

ELF LETTER

Dear ENTER NAME

I'm Cole Snow, Santa's Chief Toymaker. I'm writing to you because Christmas is nearly here! Are you excited?

I wanted to let you know that Santa has an awesome present planned for you this year. He has a good idea of what you would like, and asked me a while ago to start working on something special. I've just finished testing it out with the younger elves here at the North Pole - it was hard to get them to give it back actually, it seemed to go down very well!

I've heard that your name is on Santa's 'Nice List' for now, so as long as you keep up the good behavior and do your very best, you'll wake up to a lovely surprise on Christmas morning.

In the meantime, why not use your imagination to come up with some new games to play? If you can think of something that turns out to be really fun, you'll be so popular with your friends and family!

Wishing you a fun-filled Christmas,

Cole Snow
