Once upon a time at the North Pole, there was a very famous elf named Noel Evergreen. A champion sleigh racer, he was nicknamed 'The Icicle' for his swiftness and cool head. As a young elf, he had loved racing his small sledge downhill, and by the time Noel got his sleigh-driving license, he was unstoppable! But after winning the North Pole's sleigh racing championships for the tenth time, he wondered: once you're the ultimate best, what do you do next?

Well, who else had the answer, but Santa Claus? Santa was worried that his sleigh was too heavy, and asked if Noel could help. These days, there were more and more good children to deliver presents to, and last Christmas Eve, the poor reindeer had struggled with the weight.

Noel had never worked on a flying sleigh before, but he joined forces with Santa's reindeer trainer. Soon, he figured out how to make the sleigh lighter, but still strong enough to carry all the presents.

Nowadays, The Icicle and his team make sure that every Christmas Eve, Santa's sleigh is ready to perform at its very best.

Iceflow Lodge

All About Iceflow Lodge

Noel Evergreen's home, Iceflow Lodge, is perfect for a sleigh-racing champion. The house itself is big, with plenty of rooms, including one just for trophies! Cozy and richly decorated with North Pole candles, it's a favorite hangout for Noel and his friends.

But while there's lots of space for guests, and a huge TV for watching sleigh races, the house itself isn't the main attraction. What Noel and his friends love most about Iceflow Lodge is the sparkling, bendy ice track that surrounds it. And the huge garage hosting The Icicle's top-of-the-range racing sleighs isn't too bad either! Although he's now retired from racing professionally, Noel can never resist taking one of his rides out for a spin.

When Noel isn't at Santa's Workshop, or racing for his friends, he spends most of his time in his garage. As he has mastered sleigh engineering, he understands the lightness with power. And so, although only Noel has the magical ability to fly, he's always working on his fleet. This way, Noel enjoys the results of his hard work, on his very own racing track.

ELF LETTER

Dear Enter Name Here

Christmas is nearly here! Are you excited? I'm Noel Evergreen, Santa's Head Sleigh Engineer. If you follow North Pole sleigh racing, you might have heard of me by my nickname, The Icicle?

Anyway, I'm writing to let you know that Santa's on track for another smooth delivery run this Christmas Eve. The sleigh is in top condition, and I hear that the reindeer are doing very well.

As you can imagine, it's a long journey that must be planned out very carefully, and your house is one of the last stops. I'm sure you've been very good this year and haven't dropped off Santa's list, but I wanted to remind you to keep up the good work.

(And since Santa will be getting tired by the time he reaches you - well, don't tell him I told you this, but you can maybe win a few bonus points by leaving out a little snack for him, before you go to bed!)

Have an awesome Christmas - I hope you get whatever you want most!

Noel Evergreen
